Editor's Note

As you probably already know, America Online has purchased the parent company of MAD Magazine, Time Warner. In the future it will be known as AOL Time Warner.

The question arises: WIII MAD continue to be hard on AOL, poking fun at every phase of its operation, as it has since AOL came into being?

The answer, of course, is a definite YESI We, the editors of MAD, are a fearless lot, and nothing here has, or

Of course, it will be harder to poke fun at AOL, given their will, changel dramatic improvement in service. We're not sure if that is due to the millions they have spent (wisely) in buying brand new state-of-the-art equipment. Or perhaps It is AOL's outstanding leadership, starting with its brilliant founder, Stephen Case (Or as we prefer to call him, our buddy, Steve.)

No, our sights will not be lowered, our guns will not be unloaded! We will still target online services, especially those REAL crappy ones like Prodigy and Juno. You know what we mean: the online services that REALLY suck. The ones that could take a lesson from the leader in online services, AOLI

DATE MAIL

On the very first page of issue #389, under the Mad logo, the date reads "January 1900." Is this a result of the dreaded Y2K bug, or did you just slip that in so schmucks like me would write letters like this about how goofy you are?

Jack Hornsby, Mandeville, LA

Jackie - We wish we were that clever. In truth, our entire Y2K compliance program was run by none other than that bumbling idiot Godfrey. We thought we had stopped the presses in time, but it's clear that you got one of the copies with 1900 in it. We contacted famed logographer and misprint expert Hans Brickface of Han's Bric-A-Brac & Boo-Boos and asked him to assess what such an issue would fetch at auction. A startled and delighted Brickface said he wouldn't sell that issue at auction for under $3,000. It looks like the new millennium is getting off to a Y2ok start for you! Thanks for writing! -Ed.

STOMP THE INSANITY

Re: Issue #388's "MAD Looks at What's on the Back of your Ticket" Riverdance stub. Obviously there are no Irish step dancers on your staff! Anyone knows that "Lord of the Dance" is "Stompity Stomp Stompa" and "Riverdance" is "Tikaty Tikki Tikki." You are getting the shows mixed up!

Steve Turner, Portland, OR

Steverino — Au contraire, it is YOU who have mis-stepped with your missive! It just so happens that MAD's own Duck Edwing (Formerly Ireland's favorite son Duck O'Edwing, before coming to America and changing his name for professional reasons) was the original Lord of the Dance. Duck assures us that "Stompity Stomp Stompa" is the correct sound effect for Lord of the Dance. Had it been "Klippity Klippity Klop," we would have been referencing the special All-Equestrian Lord of the Dance production, currently on tour in the former Soviet Union. Tikity Tikki Ta Tal —Ed.

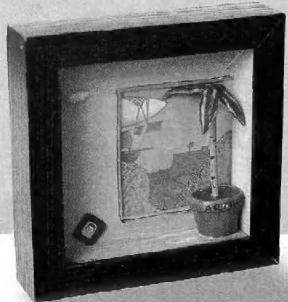

SHOOTING HIS MOUTH OFF

In MAD #389's "The 20 Dumbest People. Events and Things of 1999" you lash out in #16 at "Random Acts of Senseless Violence." I see why one would think this is dumb. and I agree. It was the second half that bothered me where you wrote "And as long as the NRA has Congress in its pocket, nut jobs will have easy access to guns and the body count will rise." How could you possibly blame these acts of violence on the NRA? The NRA's sole purpose is to preserve the values of our founding fathers who wrote the Constitution. Congress has nothing to do with it. Do you think making anti-gun laws will prevent psychopaths from going nuts and killing people? Did the already present law, which required gun owners to restrict access of their guns from their children stop those children from firing upon their peers in Littleton on April 20th? The answer to both questions is no! I know you won't print this on your letters page, because it criticizes your magazine.

Thomas Morris IV, Thorofare, NJ

Tommy-Boy - It's rare that a single letter can make us do a 180° turn on our long-held core beliefs. But such is the case with your missive. We now have to announce that we have become 100% pro guns. It was somewhere halfway through your insipid diatribe that we wished with every bone in our body that we in fact owned a gun and could load it, put it to our heads and pull the trigger, thus ending our misery once and for all, as we curl up in the eternal bliss that is the sweet, sweet darkness of death. Oh lordy, come save us now from this insufferable bore! Oh, wait! We have a better idea, why don't you go and shoot yourself - that's a fine and dandy idea! Thanks for writing! -Ed.

LIVE AND LET DIORAMA

"ABSENTEE EXCUSE NOTES"

In MAD #388's "Absentee Excuse Notes Through History" I noticed the daughter of Jean-Paul Sartre is wearing a Fieldston badge. I go to Fieldston and I am glad you have included our humble school in your magazine. Did his daughter go to Fieldston? If not, why did you put it in?

James deBoer, New York, NY

Jamie — The reason artist Mort Drucker put the Fieldston badge in the picture is because his granddaughter Katie Bachner is an outstanding, straight-A student at that fine institution. As for whether or not Sartre's daughter went there, we have no clue. We suggest you try the alumni office! —Ed. Class of '86

THE CAT GOES "BARF"

I have an unusual problem that only you guys can fix. I have seven cats, one of whom has a frequent upset stomach. While he had the good taste to be standing over the January 2000 issue (#389), he simultaneously had the bad taste to throw up on the page with #7 and #8 of the MAD "20 Dumbest People, Events, and Things of 1999." How's chances of you guys sending me another copy of that issue?

Sue Cunningham, Waynesville, NC

Suzy-Q — How's chances? How's chances of you getting a free Issue? Your chances of getting a free issue are just slightly better than a kitten's chances of survival after being sat on by that fat chick from The Practice, Camryn Manthighs! JENKINS sometimes looks through his old baseball cards and relives the thrills the players have given him over the years.

MELVIN lessens the mint book value of his baseball card collection with his habit of drawing thick black X's on the faces of every player who dies.

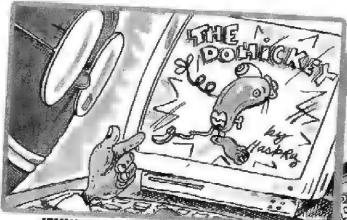

JENKINS is no Rodin, but his clay sculptures get better and better with practice.

MELVIN angrily curses the uncultured boors at the museum who refuse to display his all-Lero sculpture of Marilyn Manson.

JENKINS can often be found on ebay.com, shopping for that once-in-a-lifetime find.

MELVIN has been kicked off the online auction service 15 times, most recently for attempting to sell a forged religious heirloom purporting to be Jesus Christ's high school football helmet.

JENKINS has one shelf in his home devoted to his collection of vintage first editions of great books.

MELVIN measures the wobble under his kitchen table, walks into the antique bookshop and says, "Gimme about three inches of Tolstoy!"

HOBBIES

JENKINS carefully pins his collection of exotic butterflies, and displays the most beautiful specimens under glass.

MELVIN also hosts a large personal collection of insects...but it's not exactly what you'd call a "hobby."

If you've ever watched VH1 for more than, oh, 10 minutes, you've seen one of its irritating Behind the Music specials — one-hour "rockumentaries" fooking back on the fast times and high life of some washed-up music star. At first glance, they seem like painstakingly researched, carefully written shows. But watch a couple of them, and you'll start to notice that no matter who the show is about, every subject's story is early similar to everyone else's. It's as if each episode were being written from...

VOICE OVER: Despite the lack of support from (HIS/RER) family and the overwhelming odds against success in the competitive music industry, (ROCK STAR) was prepared to face the struggle head on.

VOICE OVER: Just when it seemed all hope was lost, (ROCK STAR)'s long-awaited first opportunity came knocking.

SOME RECORD GUY: When I first 'eard (ROCK STAR)'s damo, I knew ('E/SHE) had something out of the ord nary. I thought, "Who is this (GUY/GIRL)?"

ROCK STAR: I couldn't believe it. After all the lonely nights, missed meals and weeks without a paycheck I finally landed at number 17 mm the Bill-board charts. Here's me (ROCK STAR), the awkward (BOY/GIRL) from the mean streets of (ROCK STAR'S HOME CITY), and now I'm a star...literally overnight.

VOICE OVER: But all (HIS/HER) time on the road, coupled with the demands from promoters and the record company, was beginning to take its toll on (ROCK STAR)'s marriago.

VOICE OVER: As (ROCK STAR)'s fame skyrocketed beyond (HIS/HER) dreams, every form of pleasure fell easily within (HIS/HER) reach.

SOME ROADIE: There was a lot of sex. Let me just say that - there was a lot of sex.

I mean, any (WOMAN/MAN) was at (HIS/HER) fingertips.

HOCK STAR: I'd roll into town for the concert and I couldn't even get to my hotel room without bodyguards. There were (GIRLS/CUYS) swarming me at every turn. It was crazy. It was really cool at first, but after awhile...I'm just a human being, man."

How to Mismanage an Apartment Building at the Expense of its Tenants!

With incompetent resident manager DIPTHONG BABAGANOOSH-SMITH and slumford SHAH FALAFEL

How would you like to live rent free in an overpriced, rundown apartment complex? You can, and our two experts on residential income properties will show you how, by teaching you what greedy property owners look for when hiring their legally-required onsite building managers. You'll learn how to use such phrases as:

- "No one else is complaining that there's no hot water. You must be mistaken."
- "There's no rat on your balcony! That thing. is probably a cat!"
- "You must get rid of the cat on your balcony. You are in violation of your lease!"
- "Yours is the only garbage disposal we ever have to fix! What are you putting in there?!*
- "You're the only tenant who complains about rockroaches! Do you never clean your apartment?!"
- "We're not calling the plumber or the exterminator. We suggest you luze the cockroaches into the drain, let them eat whatever is clogging the garbage disposal and then turn it on.

As a resident manager working for the owner, it's your job to keep the turn-over rate high by steadily applying the "Four I's of Property Management:"

- · Intimidation ("How dare you knock on my door during normal business hours!")
- · Indifference ("No one else's kitchen is on fire. I don't know what to tell you.")
- Ignorance ("How was I supposed to know.") you were on vacation? I think your furniture's still in the alley.")
- Irresponsibility ("It's not my job.")

Additionally, you'll learn to:

 Always answer your phone with "I'm busy! I'il have to call you back!" . Not call tenants back. • Use your passkey to root through tenant's apartments when they're not home. • Reply to every complaint with "No one else has mentioned anything..." despite the number of similar complaints you've heard. • Sign for and keep tenant's deliveries and steal their mail. . And much, much more!

Dipthong Babaganoosh-Smith has been the resident manager of a 25-unit building in Los Angeles since 1995. He proudly regards the fact that he has been hanged and burned in effigy by his tenants as a testament to his success. Shalt Falafel owns fourteen surprisingly decrepit huildings on Los Angeles' fashionable Westside, nine of which he hasn't stepped foot inside in over three years.

An Evening With Native American Naomi Running Elk

Born and Braised in the Minnosa tribe located in a trailer park within the Ramada reservation in Monsey, New York, Naomi Running Elk is the epitome of today's independent Native American woman: noble, spiritual and strong-willed - but not so strong-willed as to turn down a couple hundred bucks to stand in front of a bunch of ignorant white folks and talk about her rich heritage.

Running Elk is a wealth of Native American knowledge:

- The spiritual legacy of the modern American Indian as pieced together from things she saw on TV on Grizzly Adams, Public Service Announcements against littering, F-Troop reruns and Mazola corn oil commercials
- · Where to buy those little Indian dreamcatcher-thingys everyone has dangling on their rearview mirror these days
- How to make your own totem pole by taping together and painting empty oatmeal boxes

Plus, you'll be there when Naomi tells you about her recent journey for spiritual fulfillment across Mother Earth via I 95 to the Mohegan Sun Casino in Uncasville, CT for a weekend of the loosest slots this side of Atlantic City!

How to Write Dirty Limericks

If you feel the need to be creative with the written word, it's time to explore your raunchy side by writing dirty limericks! Discover how to meld exotic locales, descriptive terms for geniunique fetishes or unfortunate sexual maladies into hilarious rhymes - the very same kind you've seen scratched on men's room partitions with a key!

Self-described dirty old man George Stroker is an expert in the field of filthy limericks, and in his experiential workshop, he'll demystify the process of writing them by explaining how to:

- Work ass-backwards: Starting with an amusing body part and building a rhyme
- · Make celebrities part of the fun: How to work the names "Alan Funt," "Chris Hardwick," "Zasu Pitts," "Tom Seaver" and others into your creations
- Get beyond Venus: Avoiding overused, obvious rhyming words

Before retiring, George Stroker was an executive at Aer Lingus, Stussy and most recently, the Bellagio Hotel & Casino. He is the author of such books as Here I Sit Broken-Hearted and There Was a Young Woman Named Dinah. He currently lives in Nantucket,

Writing TV Comedy

How to Rework the Unfunny and Rejected Seinfeld Spec Script You Submitted Two Years Ago to Fit a Sitcom That's Still in Production

ust because Seinfeld went off the air in 1998 doesn't mean that the awful script you wrote needs to die, too. In this comprehensive workshop, industry expert Mike Hack will show you how to rework that script to fit any number of sitcoms that are still being produced.

YOU'LL LEARN HOW TO:

- Use your word processor to go through and replace all the "Kramers" with "Moeshas"
- Fine-tune Elaine's dialogue so it's more feminine and better suits Jack of Will and Grace
- Substitute all references to sex with jokes about zits or gym class and submit it to any show in ABC's "TGIF" line-up

So what if you have no experience as a comedy writer, your script isn't even typed, you misspelled "Seinfeld" throughout it and you "borrowed" the plot from an episode of Mr. Belvedere? This doesn't mean that Hollywood shouldn't take you seriously!

Mike Hack has had about as much luck as you've had writing for TV. He's submitted the same, identical, awful script to Suddenly Susan, Holding the Baby and two different failed Dabney Coleman shows. His experience within the industry includes going to a taping of Saved. By the Bell, and seeing Ed "Al Bundy" O'Neill while rollerblading in Santa Monica.

An Evening With That Homeless Woman Who's Always Outside the Post Office Asking for Spare Change

 \mathbf{Y} ou've seen her there every time you go in to buy stamps or ship a package. Maybe you've given her a few coins, a half-eaten sandwich or perhaps just a dirty look. She's Dorothy, that homeless woman who's always outside the post office asking for spare change, and she's ready to answer your questions, such as:

- . Didn't you used to have two cats?
- . Why don't you get a job?
- · Didn't you used to have just one slipper?
- . Do you know what the cut-off time is for Next Day mail?
- Where do you go when it rains?

If you've ever wondered just what exactly homeless people do in public restrooms for hours at a time or how to give yourself a complete sponge bath with a single Handi-Wipe found in the dumpster behind KFC, then this is the class for you! Bring your questions, as well as any empty cans or bottles.

Dorothy has been on the streets for seven years. She is the mother of two thoughtless sons whom she nonetheless loves dearly, and who track her down once a year, alleviate their guilt by cleaning her up and taking her out for Christmas dinner and giving her a hundred bucks before turning her loose.
